UNITED STATES' BRIEF IN OPPOSITION TO NCR CORPORATION'S RULE 7(h)
EXPEDITED NON-DISPOSITIVE MOTION FOR STAY OF PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION PENDING APPEAL

NCR Corporation has not established a right to a stay of this Court's preliminary injunction while it pursues an appeal, as demonstrated by a well-developed body of case law addressing similar requests under Fed R. Civ. P. 62(c). A recent decision by Judge Stadtmueller articulates the test to be applied here.

A court's decision whether to stay an order pending appeal is a discretionary one, informed by the consideration of the following factors provided by the Supreme Court:

(1) whether the stay applicant has made a strong showing that he is likely to succeed on the merits; (2) whether the applicant will be irreparably injured absent a stay; (3) whether issuance of the stay will substantially injure the other parties interested in the proceeding; and (4) where the public interest lies.

Hilton v. Braunskill, 481 U.S. 770, 776, 107 S. Ct. 2113, 95 L. Ed. 2d (1987).

Girl Scouts of Manitou Council, Inc. v. Girl Scouts of the United States, No. 08-CV-184, 2010 WL 2292932, at *1 (E.D. Wis. June 3, 2010). As Judge Adelman recognized in another decision, “[b]ecause the burden of meeting this standard is a heavy one, more commonly stay requests will not meet this standard and will be denied.” In re The Proctor & Gamble Co., 334 F. Supp. 2d 1112, 1117 (E.D. Wis. 2004) (quoting 11 Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Mary Kay Kane, Federal Practice & Procedure § 2904, at 502-03 (2d ed. 1995)).

Although the Hilton factors are applied in judging requests for stay of various types of orders under Fed. R. Civ. P. 62(c), including final orders entered after trial, the factors themselves are “similar to those governing preliminary injunctions.” EEOC v. Mgmt. Hospitality of Racine, Inc., No. 06-C-0715, 2011 WL 1883949, at *1 (E.D. Wis. May 17, 2011) (Adelman, J.). For that reason, it would be particularly incongruous for this Court to grant a stay of its own preliminary injunction, absent some sort of compelling new information brought to light by NCR. But NCR offers nothing new; the company merely reargues its opposition to the preliminary injunction.

1. NCR is Unlikely to Obtain a Seventh Circuit Reversal

“[T]o satisfy the first Hilton factor, the movant must ‘demonstrate a substantial likelihood of success, not merely the possibility of success.’” Girl Scouts, 2010 WL 2292932, at *1 (quoting In re Forty-Eight Insulations, Inc., 115 F.3d 1294, 1301 (7th Cir.1997); emphasis added by Girl Scouts). Any assessment of NCR’s likelihood of success on appeal must account for the deferential standard of review that the Court of Appeals will employ. In an appeal of the grant of a preliminary injunction, the Seventh Circuit reviews “the district court’s legal rulings de novo, its factual determinations for clear error, and its balancing of the factors for an abuse of discretion.” Pro’s Sports Bar & Grill, Inc. v. City of Country Club Hills, 589 F.3d 865, 870 (7th Cir. 2009). And the Seventh Circuit has made clear in a related case that it is especially unlikely to upset findings that deserve “a double dose of deference” under CERCLA. United States v. George A. Whiting Paper Co., 644 F.3d 368, 372 (7th Cir. 2011). That will include this Court’s determination at the preliminary injunction stage that NCR has “not come close to showing that the EPA’s decisions on [cleanup remedy selection] matters are arbitrary or capricious.” Dkt. 172 at 15. The Court’s thorough and fact-bound analysis of NCR’s divisibility arguments is equally unlikely to be upset on appeal.

2. The Balance of Harms and the Public Interest Militate Against a Stay

In its April 27 decision granting the motion for a preliminary injunction, the Court found:

[T]here is a substantial risk of irreparable harm to the public if the injunction would not issue. And for the same reasons, the equities favor issuance of an injunction as soon as possible because the harm to the public outweighs any potential harm to NCR.

Dkt. 370 at 14. More specifically, the Court has determined that dredging at full pace “means the public will benefit from the full cleanup sooner” and “[d]epriving the public of that benefit is certainly irreparable harm.” Dkt. 172 at 16. And “an injunction requiring an increased pace in river cleanup is clearly directed to avoiding the irreparable harm caused by continued exposure to PCBs.” Id. Finally, “NCR is not without any recourse whatsoever in the event the Whiting contribution decision is overturned. . . . The risk of irreparable harm to NCR is thus quite low.” Dkt. 370 at 14.

NCR offers nothing new to negate the Court’s prior findings. For example, NCR gives no indication that it has discovered unexpected obstacles or unforeseen burdens of compliance with the preliminary injunction. NCR could have brought any such issues to the Court’s attention in “an affidavit or declaration for purposes of (1) attesting to facts pertinent to the motion and/or (2) authenticating documents relevant to the issue(s) raised in the motion” under Civil L.R. 7(h). NCR’s silence on such matters speaks volumes.

The Court should deny NCR’s request to stay the preliminary injunction while it pursues its appeal.
